Belgian law may force U.S. to stop attending NATO meetings

by Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said today that American officials may stop attending NATO meetings in Belgium because of a law that allows "spurious" suits accusing American leaders of war crimes.

Rumsfeld said the United States will withhold any further funding for a new NATO headquarters building here until the matter is resolved. He spoke during a press conference following the NATO defense ministerial.

The problem stems from Belgium's Universal Competence Law. Under this law, U.S. Central Command chief Army Gen. Tommy Franks has been charged with war crimes for his actions in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Former President George H.W. Bush, Vice President Dick Cheney, Secretary of State Colin Powell and retired Army Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, former CENTCOM commander, have also been charged for their roles in the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

The law gives Belgian courts the power to try citizens of any nation for war crimes. "These suits are absurd," Rumsfeld said. He said Franks went to great lengths to spare civilian lives during the war in Iraq.

"The point is this: By passing that law, Belgium has turned its legal system into a platform for divisive, politicized lawsuits against officials of its NATO allies," Rumsfeld said.

The secretary said that it's not for outsiders to tell the Belgian government what to do.

"We respect their sovereignty," he said. "We respect it even though Belgium appears not to respect the sovereignty of other countries."

But, he said, Belgium must understand there are consequences. "We will have to seriously consider whether we can allow senior uniformed and civilian officials to come to ... Brussels," he said.

"Certainly until this matter is resolved we will have to oppose any further spending for construction of the new NATO headquarters in Brussels. Until we know with certainty that Belgium intends to be a hospitable place for NATO to conduct its business."

This is not the first time that U.S. officials have complained about the law. Joint Chiefs chairman Air Force Gen. Richard Myers commented on the law during a visit to NATO in April.

In March, Secretary of State Colin Powell also complained about the law.

U.S. Embassy officials said there have been discussions in the Belgian government about the law and its unintended consequences.

Uniform tips

■ When wearing military uniforms during hours of darkness and low visibility, those working on the flightline must wear reflective belts in the course of their duties. With the exception of security forces members, all military members must wear a reflective belt or vest at all times while outside during hours of darkness or low-light conditions of dawn and dusk. Civilians are encouraged to do the same.

■ Pencils and pens should be concealed, except when carried in compartment of left battle dress uniform pocket or in left pocket of off-duty and hospital white uniforms.

■ Beepers and wireless phones should be clipped to waistband or purse or carried in left hand. They are prohibited unless required for duty.

■ Headphones and earphones are prohibited unless required to perform duties.

News & Notes from Around the DOD and Air Force

Staff, tech list out Thursday

The Air Force plans to release its list of new technical and master sergeant promotions Thursday (June 27 for those units across the international date line) and its list of new staff sergeant promotions Aug. 13 (Aug. 14 for those units across the international date line).

The lists of those selected for promotion will be available on the Air Force Personnel Center's home page by close of business June 27 and Aug. 14 respectively.

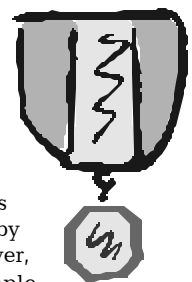

Unauthorized medals

Several new awards, such as the Global War on Terrorism medals and Air and Space Campaign Medal have recently been announced and are being developed.

These new awards have been advertised by several means. However, their criteria and implementation procedures have not been finalized. Air Force members are not authorized to wear new awards on their uniform that are not yet fully developed and authorized by the Air Force.

When the criteria and implementation procedures are concluded, local military personnel flights will have full implementation information. Until then, Air Force personnel are advised and cautioned that commercially procuring new awards does not automatically authorize their use on the Air Force uniform.

For more, airmen at Lajes can call the military personnel flight at 2-1343.

Tech orders a click away

Well-thumbed-through volumes of technical orders are going the way of quill pens and ink pots here as a growing number of workers are using a browser-based technical order library.

Two years in the making, the library puts the latest technical orders a mouse-click away from each of the 10,000 or so mechanics at the Oklahoma City Air Logistics Center, Randolph AFB, Texas.

This allows them instant access where precious minutes were wasted with a paper system.

He said the initial set-up cost approximately $250,000, with another $250,000 for two years of Analytics work.

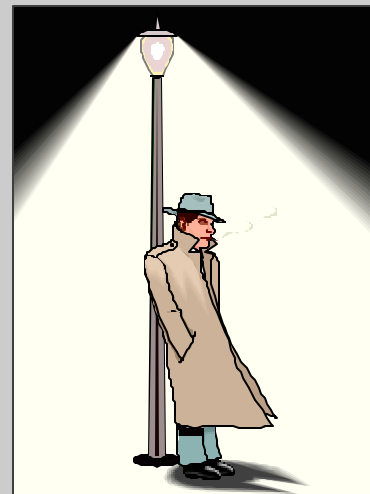

Gale Black, file clerk section chief, said the Air Force wants to have a paperless technical data system by 2007 and no longer distributes paper copies.

Form flowing away

FormFlow is being replaced by Web-based Information Management Tools. The new solution allows users to open IMTs, fill-in and save online or stand-alone mode.

All Air Force forms haven't been transferred to IMTs yet. However, many are available. According to USAF officials, the IMT version of Air Force Form 1206 must be used starting July 1.

Work group managers have more details.

Do you know if someone's watching you?

Here are some ways to tell if someone's watching:

■ Someone near the base using or carrying video equipment, cameras or other observation equipment;

■ Someone with base maps or facility photos or diagrams with facilities highlighted or notes regarding infrastructure or listing of installation personnel;

■ Someone possessing or observed using night vision devices near the base perimeter or local area;

■ Someone seen parking or loitering in the same area over a multiple-day period with no apparent reasonable explanation;

■ A pattern or series of false alarms requiring law enforcement or emergency services response;

■ Theft of military identification cards or government license plates;

■ Civilians with military weapons, clothing or equipment.

To report suspicious activities, call 911, 2-3221, 2-3222, 2-3223, or 2-4180 from official government buildings; from base housing or off base, call 295-571-911, 295-573-221, 295-573-222, 295-573-223 or 295-574-180.

The Portuguese emergency number is 112.

COMMENTARY

Teddy bear learns OPSEC importance

by Charlie T. Bear
as told to Capt. Krista Carlos
Air Mobility Command
News Service

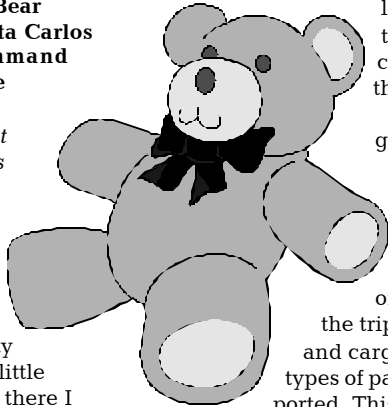

(Editor's Note: What you are about to read is based on a true story.)

CHARLESTON AFB, S.C. — I thought only humans could get in trouble for operational security violations, not a poor little teddy bear like me. So there I was, locked in a safe by an Air Force Office of Special Investigations special agent, all by myself, with no one to love or take care of me.

If only people had taken the time to think about operations security, then maybe I wouldn't be in this situation.

My name is Charlie T. Bear, and I once belonged to a third grade class at an elementary school. My previous owner donated me to Charleston AFB to help her students learn about math and geography. She asked some of the base's air and ground crews to transport me to all the different countries they travel and document their journeys in a notebook I carried around my neck.

I came equipped with a letter stating my name and where I came from, along with a request for crews to annotate locations that I've flown to and details about cargo and personnel that we airlifted.

It seemed like such a good idea.

Inside my notebook, they listed all the locations we flew to, how many passengers we carried, what time of day we flew, how long the trip was, how much fuel and cargo we had and what types of passengers we transported. This included some really cool details, but what some of the crews didn't realize was that some of that information was sensitive.

I think the crews thought that since I belonged to a third grade class, they could be more open about listing details of our travels.

Unfortunately, this was not the case.

After a very educational trip to the Middle East, I was able to add to my list three more countries I had never visited before. The names of the countries can't be released, but they were written down in my notebook.

We transported quite a few passengers and pallets before I was sent back to Rhein-Main Air Base, Germany, again. After another eight- to 10-hour mission, we were back at Charleston. I was happy to be home and to see my third grade class again, but little did I know what was in store for me.

After getting off the plane, I was passed to the 437th Aerial Port Squadron who put me on a flight to somewhere in South America. What could have been such a fun trip was shortly canceled once someone in the squadron thumbed through my notebook and noticed it contained operational details.

Within two hours, I was swept up by the OSI, taken to their building and questioned by two special agents. The agents placed me in a dark safe and confiscated my notebook and letter.

So there I was, back where the story begins. Locked in a dark safe because several people failed to practice good OPSEC. Details as seemingly harmless as cargo transported, locations flown and personnel carried, when put together, create a big picture that can pose a threat to the operational security of many flying missions.

My story is just a warning to personnel out there who may encounter other passengers like me. Be careful and mindful of what you say and write, even if it appears to be harmless. You never know where the information may end up.

I'm flying once again, my notebook is lighter now the sensitive information was removed. And my air and ground crew friends are no longer recording such details in my notebook.

Men and Women of USAFE,

The men and women of US Air Forces in Europe performed superbly during Operation IRAQI FREEDOM. The world witnessed joint warfighting at its best and the critical role played by well-trained and well-led airmen.

Many of your airmen deployed forward to the region while those remaining provided critical logistical support for troop and supply movements such as the historic air drop of the 173rd Airborne Brigade. Your airmen maintained a 100% launch rate allowing coalition forces to deliver a powerful strike in the northern part of Iraq.

Please relay my sincere appreciation to all the members of your command. May God bless our great Air Force and our great nation!

Sincerely

Gen. John Jumper
Air Force Chief of Staff

Dear Men and Women of USAFE

As our Air Force Chief of Staff General John P. Jumper pays tribute to you in the accompanying May 12 letter, I, too, extend my sincere appreciation to each of you for your support during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Your incredible contributions immeasurably helped our joint team attain victory resulting in freedom for the Iraqi people.

Whether forward deployed or providing support for contingency operations at home station — active duty, Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve, Air Force civilian and family members—your collective contributions played integral roles in the overwhelming success of OIF. I could not be more proud of our entire USAFE team during this time of sustained, increased operations tempo. I salute and thank you for all you do for USAFE, our Air Force and the United States of America.

Sincerely

Gen. Gregory Martin

Biggest island festival returns

by Eduardo Lima Community Relations Adviser

The Sanjoaninas Festival, which begins tonight in Angra and will run through June 29, is the largest non-religious festival on Terceira Island and the Azores archipelago dating back to the 16th century, although in the beginning it did have a religious connection.

During this era, a nobleman named João Vieira, "O Velho," ordered the construction of a chapel in the west corner of Rua de São João to honor the noblemen's protector, St. John the Baptist, Portugal's most honored saint. The name Sanjoaninas comes from the name São João, or St. John.

While Vieira built the chapel, other noblemen asked the King's permission to exercise their combat skills, thus creating jousts and tournaments in the town's main square - called Royal Festivities - which were presided by the oldest noblemen.

On June 24 — now Angra's municipal holiday — noblemen headed for St. John's chapel to hear mass and pray for success in their contests.

Sanjoaninas honors St. John and is a legacy of a secular tradition on the island. The festival has evolved over the years and now includes, parades, musical concerts featuring different music styles, arena and street bullfights, sports activities, as well as other cultural events.

In addition to all these events, there will be some restaurants and food booths installed in the Bailhão parking lot located in the southwest side of Angra. This is also the location where the major concerts will take place.
